01 Thesis and valuation view

We rate Revolut's latest private valuation as STRETCHED: our fair value is $72bn, 40% below the $121.2bn implied by secondary trading in October 2026. Revolut is one of the best-run fintechs in the world: revenue grew 46% in 2025 to $6.0bn with a 38% pre-tax margin. But $121bn is 51 times our 2026 earnings estimate, about 2.5 times the multiple of listed peers.

Three points

- Growth with profits. 2025 was the fifth profitable year in a row. Eleven product lines each make more than £100m, so the business no longer depends on one source of income.

- The UK banking licence changes the model. Full bank status lets Revolut lend customer deposits, which should raise interest income, but also brings bank-level capital rules.
- The price is set by a thin market. The $121bn figure comes from employee share sales marked by Forge, not from a new primary round. Only a small number of shares change hands at that price.

> WHAT WOULD MAKE US WRONG
>
> If Revolut keeps growing above 30% a year to 2031 and lists in New York at 30x earnings, our bull case gives $134bn today. US-listed Robinhood trades at 37x forward earnings, so a premium listing is possible.

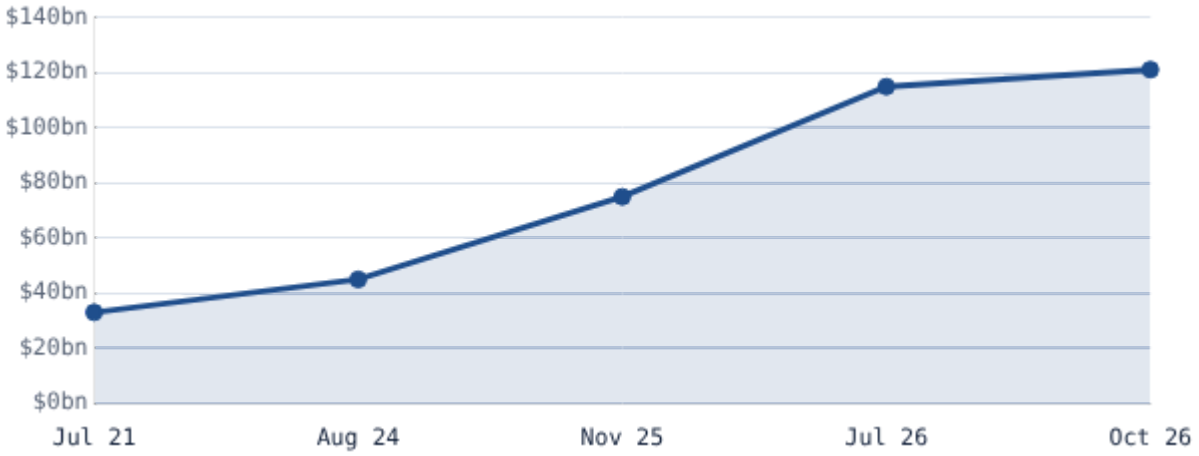

02 The surprise: $45bn to $121bn in two years

Revolut's value has risen faster than its profits. In August 2024 a share sale valued it at $45bn. In November 2025 another sale set $75bn. In July 2026 a secondary sale confirmed $115bn, and on 15 October 2026 Forge Global marked the shares at $2,125 each, or about $121.2bn. That makes Revolut more valuable than BNP Paribas, Europe's largest bank by assets (about $108bn). The CEO says an IPO is about two years away, and the Financial Times reports an internal target of $150-200bn.

Exhibit 2 2025 revenue by product line ($bn)

Insights4VC from the 2025 annual report. Lines shown add to about $4.4bn; the rest is other products and business banking.

The mix is broad. Card fees (about $1.0bn), interest income (about $1.0bn), wealth and trading ($0.9bn), FX ($0.8bn) and subscriptions ($0.7bn, +67%) are all large. Subscriptions are the most valuable line because they recur every month and do not depend on interest rates.

Customer balances rose 66% to $67.5bn, and transaction volumes rose 65% to £1.3 trillion. Revenue per customer is still low, which is the main upside if Revolut sells more lending and wealth products to existing users.

At the peer median, Revolut would be worth $50bn on earnings and $67bn on revenue. Nubank, the closest comparable as a mass-market digital bank, trades at only 13x earnings after a 17% fall on 26 October. Only Robinhood comes close to Revolut's multiples.

06 Main model: earnings at exit

We project revenue and net margin to 2031, apply an exit P/E, and discount back five years at a 15% cost of equity, the return we think an investor needs for a fast-growing, newly licensed bank before IPO. Revolut is profitable, so we assume no further dilution.

SCENARIO	REVENUE GROWTH 2027-31	NET MARGIN 2031	NET INCOME 2031	EXIT P/E	VALUE TODAY	PROBABILITY
Bear	22% → 10%	27%	$4.6bn	18x	$41bn	25%
Base	32% → 14%	30%	$6.8bn	25x	$84bn	50%
Bull	38% → 18%	32%	$9.0bn	30x	$134bn	25%
Probability-weighted					$86bn	100%

Exhibit 3 Sensitivity of the base case ($bn) to cost of equity and exit P/E

COST OF EQUITY \ P/E	18X	22X	25X	30X	35X
12.0%	69	84	96	115	134
13.5%	65	79	90	108	126
15.0%	61	74	84	101	118
16.5%	57	69	79	95	110
18.0%	53	65	74	89	103

Even with a 12% cost of equity and a 35x exit P/E, the base case reaches $134bn, close to the last price. The market price needs both optimistic growth and an optimistic exit.

Earnings exit model	$86bn	50%	$41bn	$134bn
Peers P/E (median 20.9x)	$50bn	25%	$31bn	$89bn
Peers P/S (median 8.0x)	$67bn	25%	$20bn	$115bn
Fair value	$72bn	100%

VERDICT · STRETCHED · FAIR VALUE $72BN

Our fair value is close to the November 2025 valuation of $75bn. Since then the price has risen 62% while the business has grown at about 40% a year. We would see $121bn as supported if Revolut showed 2026 pre-tax profit above $3.5bn and a clear path to US banking profitability.

08 Risks and catalysts

Risks

- Regulation: bank status brings capital requirements that could slow growth.
- Rates: lower rates reduce interest income on $67bn of balances.
- US expansion: licences pending; the US is a crowded market.
- Liquidity of shares: secondary prices can fall quickly.

Catalysts

- 2026 annual report (expected spring 2027).
- US banking licence decision.
- £10bn five-year investment plan and new markets such as Mexico.
- IPO preparation, expected in about two years.
